

CRAIN'S

NEW YORK BUSINESS®

July 28 -- August 3, 2003

Grant delays threatening companies' survival

The delays could ultimately affect small firms that want to take advantage of relocation incentives by moving downtown. They may start to doubt that those benefits will be delivered as promised, real estate broker Richard I. Selig fears.

"This sends the wrong message to the businesses that are contemplating coming here," says Mr. Selig, who's waiting for a grant for Hunter Realty Organization. "The government isn't living up to its responsibilities." ■

(EXCERPT)